

Post-Graduate Scholarship Opportunities and Prizes in the School of Psychology at the University of Sydney

There are many scholarships and prizes available to all students enrolling in post-graduate research degrees at the University of Sydney (see Research Office). In addition to these, the School of Psychology has a number of scholarships and prizes available to post-graduate students enrolled in our school. They include those listed below. Each scholarship holder also has the opportunity to be involved in teaching undergraduates and thus obtaining added income.

The Margaret Stewart Scholarship

This scholarship was established in 1988 from a bequest by George Stewart, to support students undertaking research into the relationships between ethics and behaviour. Its current value is $19,200 per annum.

The Lucy Firth Sydney University Postgraduate Scholarship

This scholarship was established in 1997 from the Estate of Ms Lucy Firth, a graduate and later research assistant in the school. Its current value is $16,500 per annum.

The Winifred O'Neil Sydney University Postgraduate Scholarship

This scholarship provides $2500 per annum based on meritorious performance in Undergraduate Psychology. Preference is given to students who are visually impaired or, if there is no visually impaired applicant, to students with other disability. There is the possibility of the Scholarship being awarded to a suitable candidate without disability in the absence of suitable visually impaired or disabled applicants.

The Campbell Perry International Research Scholarship

This scholarship was created in 2005 from the Estate of Campbell Perry, who was awarded his undergraduate and PhD degrees in this school in 1960 and 1966 respectively, but completed his career as Distinguished Emeritus Professor at Concordia University. Each year, 2 scholarships are offered. They provide $6,000 for a (normally) 2nd year PhD student, supported by an APA or equivalent, to spend between 2 and 8 weeks visiting international scholars relevant to their research project.

PhD Completion Scholarships

Each year, up to 2 Completion Scholarships are offered to students about to commence their final (8th) semester of enrollment, and who do not have any other financial award during this final period of their candidature. The scholarship will provide the equivalent of an APA stipend ($19,600) covering the period leading up to the final submission date, with a maximum period of 6 months.

The H Tasman Lovell Memorial Medallion

Henry Tasman Lovell was the first Professor of Psychology in the Department (from 1929) and in Australia. Each year up to two bronze medallions may be awarded to the best Ph.D. theses in Psychology.

Publication Prize

The School also offers annual Publication Prizes, awarded to the postgraduate student(s) with the most successful publication history in the previous year.

Best Presentation at Annual Postgraduate Conference

Each year, postgraduate research students in the School organize a day-long conference. Prizes are awarded for the best presentations.
